Sadat Made Moscow Trip

Cairo Bars a New Truce, But Attack Is Not Likely

By Jesse W. Lewis Jr.

CAIRO, March 7 (WP).-President Anwar Sadat sald tonight that Egypt would not agree to another formal extension of the Middle East cease-fire, but indicated that Egypt's decision did not mean an immediate resump-tion of fighting.

"It is beyond our ability to extend the cease-fire more than we already have." Mr. Sadat sald in a live radio and television "This does not mean that diplomatic activity will stor and that the guns alone will speak. We will decide ourselves on cur outy in the right time and right circumstances."

The Egyptian president also said that he made a secret 36hour visit to Moscow last week to discuss the Middle East situation with Soviet leaders.

Afr. Sadat's speech was deliver-ed five and a half hours before the third cease-fire period ended All told, the Egyptian-Israeli cease-fire line along the Suez canal has been quiet for 210 days since Aug. 7. Many diplomatic observers feel that an open-ended de facto cease-fire will not cripple the

While Mr. Sadat's speech may be interpreted for domestic Egyptian consumption as being tough and creating a greater sense of urgency, many observers see it giving the big powers and United Nations special envoy Gunnar Jarring a better atmosphere in which to work.

Mr. Sadat explicitly asked the United States for help. "We ask the United States to do its duty." he said, adding that Israel was a burden on America with its demands for military assistance. ing" cease-fire has been in effect since a UN Security Council resolution was adopted unanimonsly soon after the end of the six day war in June, 1967. That resolution remains valid and binding on both sides, in the Israeli view. In an effort to win foreign support for Israel, Mr. Eban said "there would be no meaning in international integrity if there is not a broad volume of criticism" of the Egyptian approach. "If the idea is that we are frightened or intimidated." he said, " we are quite unimpressed.

Although Mr. Eban charged that Mr. Sadat had broached "about the most negative and parsimonious approach to ceasefire that could possibly be taken."
he conceded that the Egyptian stand could have been worse and therefore somewhat weakened his call for worldwide condemnation. Israel has urged Egypt constantly to drop the concept of deadline contained in the original cease-fire and its two subsequent extensions since the shooting stopped along the Suez Canal in early August, 1970.

Israel has argued that such fixed deadlines only complicate the task of seeking a negotiated settlement. But fearing Israeli footdragging, Egypt was argued that without a deadline any cease-fire would play into Israel's hands by allowing it to maintain the occupation of Egyptian ter-ritory without risk to Israel. Mr. Eban's appeal for worldwide condemnation of the Egyptian cease-fire stand was part of his wider theme—an attempt to justify Israeli peace-seeking

Sen. Jackson Makes Disclosure

New-Model Soviet Missiles Reported

By Morton Mintz

WASHINGTON, March 7 (WP). -Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D., Wash, said today that the Soviet Union, in an "omnious" develop-ment, is in the process of deploying "an advanced generation" of huge new intercontinental ballistic missiles. He said the new offensive weapons are as big or bigger than the mammoth SS-95 and probably superior to them, "not necessarily in yield, but in The Defense Department, questioned about Sen. Jackson's statement, said it was "correct that we have detected some new ICEM construction in the Soviet Union." A Pentagon spokesman, Jerry W. Friedheim, added, "We are not exactly sure what It is or what Soviet intentions are."

Sen. Jackson speculated on those intentions on "Face the Na-He was, he said. "reasonably sure. that the Russians will use "this huge buildup" not for a

The senator did not identify the source of his information about the new missiles. He said a related "ommous" derelopment involves the SS-9s. of which the Russians "have leveled deployment. Last month The Washington Post reported that well informed U.S. officials had said that, since spring, the Russians had

Diplomatic Activity Creates Optimism

By Anatole Shub FERLIN, March 7 (WP) .-Diplometic movement toward East-West accords on Berlin gathered speed here yesterday. A West Berlin negotiator, Ulrich Mueller, crossed the Communist wall to open a new set of negotiations with Gunther Kohrt, an East German deputy foreign minister. Their subject was permission for West Berliners to visit East Germany during the coming Easter holidays. After a five-hour discussion, in what Mr. Mueller called a "businesslike" atmosphere. West Berlin officials announced that a second meeting would he held

Meanwhile, Berlin specialists of the United States, Russia, Britain and France also met here yesterday to prepare Tuesday's 16th conference of the Big Four ambassadors. The Big Four are working intensively on a draft accord submitted by the three Western Allies, with the bargaining now described as having entered a "decisive" phase.

An indication of the quickened tempo of the negotiations was the disclosure yesterday that the three Western ambarsadors would meet here tomorrow with both West Berlin Mayor Klaus Schuetz and Egon Bahr. chief fore'gn policy aide to West German Chancellor Willy Brandt,

Big-4 Accord First

Bahr, who negotiated treaty with the Soviet Union last spring, launched preliminary talks earlier this winter with East German Deputy Foreign Minister Michael Kohl on normalizing relations between the two German states. In the "three-tier" pattern of Berlin negotiations, the Bahr-Kohl talk: are dependent, as are the new talks hetween West Berlin and East Germany, on a preliminary basic agreement among the Big Four.

The principal aims of the Big Four negotiators are to guarantee unimpeded access to West Berlin and to define West Berlin's relations with West Germany. Bonn officials now hope that a Big Four accord will be concluded by mid-April. Some ob-servers believe that agreement may even be reached this month. The outcome as well as timing depend largely on the Soviet Union, which will be holding its 24th Communist party congress on March 30. Chancellor Brandt's government has made it clear that, without a Berlin settlement, the Bonn parliament will not be ask-ed to ratify last year's West German nonaggression treaties with Russia and Poland. West German officials believe that Moscow and several of its East European partners are most interested in having the treaties ratified, and thus clearing the way for hroader-scale West German economic activity in Eastern Europe. The need for Western credits has been more deeply felt in the Communist world since workers' strikes broke out in Poland last December, forcing changes in the party and state

These sources disclosed that Gunnar V. Jarring, the UN special representative to the Middle East, had attached a number of provisions with regard to such key items as the future of Sharm el-Sheikh and Israeli passage through the Suez Canal. The re-sult would be to leave the way open for extensive Israeli bargaining with Egypt.

Heretofore, news reports and the statement Friday of Secretary-General Thant had indicated that Israel was being asked simply to agree to withdraw. causing Israeli political leaders like Deputy Premier Yigal Allon to charge that this was heing set as a precondition to negotiations. American officials were understood to feel that Mr. Allon's statements represent a smokescreen and an effort to divert attention away from the original Jarring communication.

Truck Flow Said to Soar On Ho Trail

Doubled in 3 Days. U.S. Sources Report

By Alvin Shuster

SAIGON, March 7 (NYT).-The flow of enemy supply trucks along the Ho Chi Minh Trail to the area of South Vietnamese operations in southern Laos has doubled in the last few days to return to the level it reached before the invasion of Lacs on Feb. 8. American military sources here reported today.

In the week ending last Wednesday, the number of trucks dropped to a daily average of about 800, according to the military sources. On Thursday, Priday and yesterday, they continued, the enemy trucks moved at a rate of about 1,600 a night.

The movement of the trucks is concentrated in the northern portions of the trail network, above Sepone, the strategic road junction that was occupied yesterday hy South Vietnamese troops. Military sources said the trucks are shuttling back and forth between supply depots in the North and concentrations of enemy troops on the northern flank of the allied incursion.

The assumption among military officers here is that Hanoi is dispatching new supplies and ammunition to its forces defending the trails so that they can stage counter-attacks. A less likely possibility, they said, is that the North Vietnamese are moving supplies hack to the North to prevent their destruction hy advancing South Vietnamese

The new increase was detected by electronic devices and recon-naissance planes as President Nixon was reporting the decline at his news conference last Thursday. The President said then that "most significantly. there has been a 55 percent decrease in truck traffic south into South Vietnam.

In his comments, the President said that the flow of Communist supplies between the area of the allied operation and South Vietnam had been cut in half. Sources here said, however, that the amount of traffic into South Vietnam before the Laos incursion had already been at a low

This was attributed to the combination of an intensive American bombing campaign as well as to the enemy's own timetable, which normally calls for a aten-up in traffic in the southern sections of the trail network late in the dry season, which ends in May. Air Force fighters and hombers. incloding the giant B-52s, and C-130 gunships, military sources said, are countering with "their most effective truck kills" of the war. The night the President spoke, for example, sources here reported that 230 enemy trucks were destroyed, shout 170 hy the

In the past three days, the sources said, more than 600 trucks were destroyed as they tried to move supplies along the northern portions of the trail. Since the beginning of the dry sesson slong the trail in January, they said, the Air Force has destroyed more than 8,000 trucks. According to military sources, the number of trucks destroyed represented about half the Communist inventory at the start of the dry season. But new trucks arrive almost daily in North Vietnam, mostly from China and the Soviet Union. Sources estimate that about 500 replacements arrive each month.

WASHINGTON, March ? (NYT),-A current Defense Department planning estimate calls for the possible retention of more than 150,000 U.S. troops in Vietnam in the summer of 1972 and upwards of 50,000 the summer thereniter

The estimate, made by senior defense officials, has recently been circulated among top Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force officials to assist the drafting a budget for submission to Congress next year.

Knowledgeable officials are quick to point out that this "budgetary guidence" does not represent a firm, presidentially approved troop withdrawal schedule. But they concede that similar guidance in the past has been remarkably close to actual force reduction levels.

lanners stress, however, that if the current South Vietnamese operation sgainst the Ho Chi Minh Trail complex in Laos is successful, they would expect a much more rapid schedule of troop reductions than that reflected in the budget guidance Indeed, in his televised news conference Thursday night. Mr. Nixon virtually pledged just that.

He affirmed that the current force reduction rate of about 12,500 men a month would be continued over a period of 'severai months' to be covered in his next reduction announcement in mid-April.

"More important," he said. "is the troop withdrawal schedule for next year." The more successful the campaign in reducing the flow of war materials moving to forward enemy troop areas, "the greater the possibility that the United States may he able to increase the rate of its troop withdrawal." he declared. The Pentagon hudget guidance, in effect, anticipates a reduction of only about 120,000 men during the 14-month period of May 1, Authorities said 16 prisoners 1971, to June 30. 1972. This would average fewer than 9,500 men a month over that time span, a marked decrease below the current withdrawal rate.

One senior military analyst suggested that if the Laos operation is rated a success, it may be possible to advance the timetable to a point "substantially" under 100,000 men hy mid-summer of next year, well under the 150,000plus figure currently projected.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., March 7 (A)—Scott Carswell, youngest son of former federal judge G. Harrold Carswell, and five other Florida State University students were arrested Friday night in a police vice squad raid on a housetraffer near the campus.

Mr. Carswell, 20, was booked on a charge of marijuana possession. His father, whose nomina-tion to the United States Supreme Court was rejected by the Senate last year, said the youth was just "in the wrong place at the wrong time."

Police said a party was in progress when the raiders entered and a student, Charlotte Searl, 19, ran from room to room gathering up marlinana and trying to eat it.

Miss Searl was charged with assault and battery on three officers who said she bit them when they tried to take the marijuana out of her mouth. She also was charged with possession of marilyana.

The officers said they also found LSD, quantities of a drug believed to be mescaline, and a boa constrictor in a box.

Against State Cut of 3,000 From Rolls

Welfare Militants March on Vegas Strip

the Rev. Ralph Abernathy and Bernadette Devlin of Northern Ireland, marched down the famed Las Vegas "strip" yesterday to protest the cutback of 3,000 per-sons from Nevada welfare rolls.

The march, sponsored by the National Welfare Rights Organization, was billed by its leaders as a peaceful demonstration, but one which would "disrupt gambling" so that casino owners will pressure state welfare officials to meet the organization's demands.

The demonstration started with a noon rally in the parking lot

28 Suffocate In Psychiatric Clinic Blaze

Elderly Men Trapped In Zurich Disaster

ZURICH, March 7 (Reuters) .-Twenty-seven elderly men died in their beds when fire raged through the geriatric wing of Zurich's lergest psychiatric clinic early yesterday morning.

Another man died when he ran beck into the blazing building to try and save his friends.

The 28 victims were mostly in their 70s and one was 90.

Thirty-two were led to safety, including 13 nurses. Firemen had broken through barred windows and locked doors in a vain bid to save the 27 who suffocated.

Most were under sedation, mentally ill and too old to help themselves, doctors said. Staff personnel were unable to reach them because of the rapid spread of smoke and flames from the blaze, which started in the room of a male nurse who was on his morning rounds. Police believe a wastepaper basket was ignited by an electric radiator, starting the blaze. The death toll was thought to be Switzerland's highest from

Americans Can Deduct Bribes On Their Income Tax Provided...

WASHINGTON, March 7 (Reuters).—Americans have been told by the income-tax man that it is perfectly legal to claim bribes as a tax deduction.

There are only two conditions: the bribe must not have been made to a government official, and the person claiming it as a tax deduction must not have been convicted on a

As far as the tax man is concerned it is immaterial if the bribe was illegal-just so long as the person who made it did not get caught.

A spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service said that as tax returns are confidential, a taxpayer could claim an illegal bribe as a deduction and be confident the tax authorities would not give him away.

The fact that bribes are tax-deductible is disclosed on page 146 of the government's official taxpayer's guide designed to help millions of Americans through the thicket of tax laws. The guide says, "Bribes and kickbacks to nongovernment officials are deductible unless the individual has been convicted of making the bribe or has entered a plea of guilty."

An example of the kind of kickback that could be put down as a legitimate tax deduction: A salesman offers a store buyer a new car if he will purchase a large order of his merchandise. The salesman then offsets the price of the car against his federal income tax. In some states, such a kickback is illegal under commercial bribery statutes-but it makes no difference as far as the Internal Revenue Service is concerned.

brutality. The two Senate investigators also charged that the U.S. policy of friendly persuasion toward the Athens regime to move on to constitutional rule had failed and that the U.S. military support through the resumption of military aid constituted the military

Speaking to newsmen at his weekly briefing yesterday, Foreign Affairs Undersecretary Christian Xanthopoulos-Palamas said: "Essentially, the report is an internal matter concerning the U.S. We do not intervene in the internal affairs of our friends and naturally our friends should not meddle in Greece's domestic

One of the headlines for which the five were charged quoted Mr. Agnew as saying. "I did not declare support for the Athens regime." The quote did not conform with the news report.

There were factory workers from Bristol demanding equal pay with men, college graduates from Essex asking equal job opportunities, housewives from Birmingham urging free all-day nurseries, as well as college students from Oxford and London holding signs that asked for "free contraception and abortion on demand."

Why an Army?

Conscious of the Communist forces stationed behind 555 miles of frontier with Czechoslovakia and Hungary, many Austrians question the need for their midget army. A petition campaign began last year to abolish the military and turn its disaster relief and police-keeping functions over to the police. That threat of uni-lateral disarmament, a startling break with tradition in a country which once ruled most of Southeastern Europe under the Austro-Hungarian Empire, prompted a campaign pledge from Mr. Kreisky to "reorganize" the army and to reduce the draft to six months

For the operatta-loving Viennese, parliament since then has provided a running performance, minus music but complete with ringing conservative rhetoric, "an army for any occasion." Meanwhile, atill serving for nine mooths, draftees go out on maneuvers which result, according to conventional countryside wisdom, in a rusb to maternity clinics nine mooths later.

The emperors of old would hardly approve of Austria's present-day foreign policy which is kept in such low profile as to be out of sight most of the time. Bot on Feb. 19 Mr. Kreisky got the go-shead from the parliamittee to begin negotiations with Communist China on diplomatic recognition. For six years, Peking has maintained an economic mission here as the small volume of trade between the two countries has slowly increased. Moscow and Washington were reportedly advised beforehand that it is business, not politics, which spurs Austria to follow Canada and Italy on the diplomatic road to

It is as refreshing as it is unexpected to find in Austria still only faint echoes of problems tearing at the fobric of so many other Western societies. Drug abuse, pollution, crime, strikes, ractal strife are barely if at all noticeable. Nor are there any significant physical traces of the ten years of big-power military occupation, although the Soviet invasion of Czecboslovakia ravived bitter postwar memories. While prices are rising, the

Austrian worker still pays only about 5 percent of his income for housing, and has one of the world's most comprehensive welfare and social security systems. While neo-fascists are acting up elsewhere in Europe today. Austria's 400,000 former Nazi party members, barred from forming a party, have made oo signi-

Anti-Semitic actions occasionally attributed to them may strike a responsive popular chord in some places, and a few Jewish survivors of Nazism are among those still struggling to repossess their former homes and belongings, but it is clear that the ideas of Adolf Hitler, a native son, remain effectively buried.

The tiny Communist party, legal under the 1955 State Treaty, has only 26,000 members and oo parliamentary seats. Split between Maoists and Muscovites. the party agitates rather futilely among factory workers and has little or no appeal for Austria's younger generation.

Recently, large red posters appeared on walls in Vienna proclaiming, as did Thomas Mann, thet "acti-Communism is the great folly of our epoch." While the posters are unsigned, Vicooese quip that the impoverished party has obviously had a new injection of Kremlin money.

Every Sunday morning, most Austrians get up early to listen to a half-hour satirical broadcast over the state-owned radio network. The program, inaugurated in the former American occupa-tion zone, is called "Der Watschenmann," literally "boon-theears mao," after a papler-mache statue in Vienna's Prater amusement park. A 19th century traditioo has it that slapping the Watschenmann relieves one's anger, and bundreds of Viennese daily pay a small sum to cuff the statue.

Two Sundays ago, the program vented its barbed wrath about two problems, which went some way toward demonstrating the magnitude of Austria's current troubles. First, Der Watschen-mann complained about a law exempting the 165 deputies of parliament and the 50 upper house members from paying taxes, making them the only taxfree citizens in the country, except prostitutes. (Emperor Franz Josef decreed that the government should not take "dirty money" from the earnings of streetwalkers.) The broadcast needled the conservatives, now in the opposition, for suddenly op-

outrage of the capital's drivers at the ban on parking imposed after construction of an underground garage with hourly charges beneath the large downtown square. The program charged that the above-ground parking ban was unfair at best, and applauded the Austrian Automobile Club which drove a car into the middle of the square and left it there in solitary illegality, defying police to issue a ticket which they knew would then be contested through the courts.

Not the least of the worries of Vienna'e city fathers is the problem of pigeons, proliferating faster, they say, than the strategic nuclear weapons American and Soviet negotiators return bere this month to discuss. Unlike the SALT talks, there is hope for a speedy solution on the pigeon front. Over the years, the plump gray birds have pecked at and stained every mooument and church in this baroque capital. When bird nets and poison failed, officials set aside $12,000 for development of a pigeon birth-

At Calley Trial

Medina, Unseen Presence, to Testify

By Richard Hammer

FORT BENNING, Ga. (NYT).-Ever since the court-martial of 1st Lt. William L. Calley jr. began bere early in November, an unseen presence has hovered over the courtroom.

This week Capt. Ernest L. Medina should get his day in court. Friday the presiding judge ordered him and Col. Oren K. Henderson, the brigade commander, and Sgt. David Mitchell, Lt. Caller's platoon sergeant, to be prepared to testify at the trial, with Col. Hendersoo ordered to be ready by Tuesday, the others the oext day.

Though, up to now, Capt. Medina has been no closer than his present station at Fort McPherson in Atlanta, 100 miles away, there have been many moments during the past five months when his name has dominated the proceedings.

And there have been other moments-not the least two weeks ago when Lt. Calley took the appeared that it was Cept. Medina, the 34-year-old former commander of C Company. First Battalion. 20th Infantry, who was on trial for the murder of 102 unarmed Vietnamese civilians at My

More than 30 defense witnesse have testified that the captain had told the company during a briefing on March 15, 1968. destroy everything" at My Lai 4 during the assault the next day. and they believed that "everything" included men, women and children, And during his two-andn-half days on the stand, Lt. Calley, the 27-year-old former leader of the company's first pletoon, over and over sgain ointed the finger of responsibility for all that happened at My Lai at Cept. Medina. The lieutenant said that all he and his men were doing was carrying out the company commander's orders.

Orders

The question of orders, then, is a crucial one. Even if, as expected, the military judge, Col. Reld W. Kennedy, instructs the six officers on the jury that orders to kill civilians are illegal and should oot be obeyed, the existence of such orders-and the military tradition of following orders first and questioning them later—could be considered by the jury to be a mitigating factor in the charge of premeditated murder against Lt. Calley.

Thus it has been the strategy of the Army prosecutor, Capt. Aubrey M. Daniel 3d, in rebuttal to bring the very existence of such orders into question. Last week he called a perade of witnesses to testify that no orders to kill men, women and children or to destroy everything had been

Obviously the key witness in such a parade would be Capt. Medina himself. By last week, the captain was reported to be eager to appear at Fort Benning to answer the charges against him and to repeat in detail the claim he has frequently made: that he "did not order a massacre."

The captain, oow swaiting a decision expected in about week on whether he will himself be court-martialed on charges of responsibility for the deaths of at least 175 civilians et My Lai. is said to be secthlog about the testimooy given at the Calley trial.

Capt. Medina's desire to testify has been matched by Capt. Daniel's desire to call him as a witness. The Army prosecutor seemed to be blocked, however, by the Army itself. On Peb. 26, two days after Lt. Calley finished testifying, Capt. Daniel was ordered by the legal adviser to the commanding general at Fort Benning not to call Capt, Medina.

for his credibility. Since he may be court-martialed too, the Army had no desire to see this kind of acknowledgement of the cap-denial as an attempt by the Army "to have its cake and eat civilian counsel, F. Lee Balley,

The Army, he said, "wants to government would be vouching convict Calley on the basis that he did everything on his ownand then it wants to convict Medina on the basis that everything that was done there came from his orders. I don't see how Capt. Medina's lawyers saw this they can have it both ways." Early last week the captain's of Military Appeals charging a "conspiracy" oo the part of Army Secretary Stanley R. Resor and other high officials to prevent Capt. Medina from testifying. Capt. Daniel, Mr. Bailey cootended, should be permitted to call Capt, Medina to rebut the claims of Lt. Calley.

Friday, the presiding judge ruled that Cept. Medine would be called.

Jurers

Jodge Kennedy had told the furors last Wednesday that at the end of the rebuttal testimony they could, with his approval, call any witness they wished. The judge specifically mentioned Capt. Medina as a possible can-didate. And the jurors promptly announced that they wanted to hear the captein. The jury began compiling a list of other witnesses as well-in-cluding Coi. Henderson and Maj. Gen. Samuel W. Koster, commander of the Americal Division at the time of the My Lai attack. Gen. Koster, one witness said last week, forestalled an oothe-spot investigation of the incident.

As it recessed for the weekend Friday, the court left open the possibility that Gen. Koster might be called. The prosecution said ft might want Gen. Koster to eppear, depending on the testimony given this week. With the growing list of jury witnesses plus at least a score of prosecution reputtal witnesses. this court-martial which began as the leaves were turning in western Georgia could still be in progress long after the first buds

Psychic Tremors in L.A.

Quake's Big After-Shock Is Mental

By Steven V. Roberts WAN NUYS, Calif., March 7

(NYT).-When the earthquake hit Los Angeles last month Dennis was a well-adjusted 6year-old. Since then, he has insisted on sleeping in the same bed with his 3-year-old sister, the baby in the family. And any time his mother raises her voice he pleads, "Please don't yell, please don't yell." Several days after the quake, a single woman in her thirties packed up and moved back to her family. "There was no way that she could stay around and face the fears alooe," said her psychiatrist. These are two of the thousands of people who are still suffering from the psychological aftershocks of the Los Angeles quake. More than three weeks later distrought victims are still asking for help; the mental damage caused by the tremor seems to be rivallog the physical damage. The Sao Fernando Valley Child Guidance Clinic, here in Van

Nuys, has seen about 600 children in person and treated 600 more over the phooe. Last week it received an average of 25 calls a Several other clinics in the San Fernando Velley, the area closest to the quake's center, have set up discussion groups for adults who want to talk out their fears. Children Worst Off

The main problem is children.

Dr. Stephen Howard, of the child guidance clinic, described some reactions:

"The symptoms are most severe at night. Some children woo't go to sleep, or won't sleep in their own room, or won't go to the bathroom alone. Some who do go to sleep wake up screaming.

Others cling to their mothers or lose their appetites or won't go One 10-year-old girl wakes op thinking someone is in the house ready to kill her. A 4-year-old boy is terrified that everything will fall of the wall. In Dennis'e case—that is not his real namesleeping with the youngest child is "a way of becoming a baby again," Dr. Howard said.

Fears, Fantasies

Adults have similar difficulty sleeping and often feel weak and helpless, according to Sam Popowsky, the chief psychiatric soclal worker at Northridge Hos-

The quake was so traumatic because it was so sudden and unpredictable. "People have warning about a fire or a tornado," explained one psychiatrist, "They can pack up or at least run away. Bot this time they awoke in the derk with all hell breaking loose." Children, in particular, woke up with all sorts of fears and fantasies. A common one was that their parents were fighting, Moreover, most children were in different rooms from their parents, and the separatioo aggravated their fright, Dr. Howard said.

He noted that the great Alaska quake of 1964, which occurred at 5 p.m., did not cause nearly the same trauma, explaining that most people were awake, it was still daylight and many families were gathered together eating dinner or preparing to eat. For the first few weeks most people who visited psychiatrists were afraid of the Los Angeles quake itself or the possibility of another one. Now many of the patients seem to be suffering from deep-seated neuroses that were "triggered" by the tremor.

For example, Dr. Howard is treating a 18-year-old girl who was a model student and daughter. After the quake she lost her self-confidence, fell into a depression and even talked about

"Children have thoughts about things like sex and anger," explained the psychologist, "and they feel guilty about such thoughts. Suddenly they're awakened and the earth is shaking and they have fantasies that someone is screaming or that they're being punished. For what? For their own bad thoughts. A quake can bring such thoughts and anxieties close to the sur-

Anxiety on Anger

After considerable questioning Dr. Howard discovered that the 13-year-old girl was airaid that she could hurt people if she got angry with them. "The quake produced terrific anxiety about what her anger could do, how destructive it could be," he said.

In a crisis situation, Dr. Howard suggests that parents stay with their children, since "a child's greatest fear is separation from its pareots." In addition, explain to them that the family is safe and keep them busy, he said. The best therapy, psychiatrists agree, is to talk about one's fears. Dr. Howard suggested that planning for future disasters include mental health services.

"The Red Cross has a Keep a Stiff Upper Lip' attitude. That's the way they maintain peace and control," he explained. urged people not to talk aboa. the earthquake. But from a mental health point of view, if you don't talk about it, your anxieties get all pent up, and it's

One of the few Stalin monuments in Eastern Europe on Tirana's Fallen Heroes Blvd.

A Rare Visit to a Small Country:

The short Boulevard of the Fallen Heroes of the Netion," leading southward to Tirana University, could easily accommodate six or eight lanes of soto traffic. But pedestrians use it without danger day or night. Cars, buses, horsedrawn wagons and cyclists pass rarely. The few cars are mainly Fiats.

On this boulevard Albaoia also keeps a memento of the days when relations with Moscow were warm-possibly the only Stalin monument in Eastern Europe. It stands 10 feet high. An Albanian guide said: "He was a great man. We are prond to have his monument and we will keep it forever" Even well-kept parks, clean boulevards and some impressive university buildings cannot overcome the general impression of drabness. The prevailing colors in clothing are dark blue, dark gray, dark brown. Dark-colored plastic raincoats create a uniformity on the streets. The language barrier and police surveillance discourage contacts between Western visitors and Albanians. West German soccer stars, officials and sports writers tried to distribute chocolates and oranges to a crowd of children always welcome, however."

and adults who gathered at their hotel. The Albanians backed off without a word. A stroll through the dimly lit side streets of Tirana at night is both revealing and depressing. The lack of traffic means an eerie quiet occasionally interrupted hy the sputtering engine of a late

Staple food is relatively cheap. A two-pound losf of dark rye bread costs about 16 cents Meat is around 60 cents a pound. A pack of 20 cigarettes costs 30 cents. The guides said there is no rationing of food or commodities. According to official figures, more than 60 percent of all Albanian villages now have electricity; agricultural production last year was about 75 percent higher than 1965; there are now 10,000 tractors compared with 10 in 1945. At the end of World War II,

75 percent of the population could neither read nor write. Last year, the government says, some 500,000 chuidren and teen-agers-one fourth of the population-attended compulsory school or were enrolled at universities and colleges. It reports illiteracy has practical-

On Not Showing the Flag

presence is often a cause of turmoil and tragedy in host countries...Turkey is only the most recent example—it is paradoxical that an American military absence should create something of a crisis in Chile. The failure of the carrier Enterprise to pay a courtesy call at Valparaiso is in essence a tempest in a teapot, an example, possibly, of bureaucratic hungling rather than calculated policy. But the tempest itself is evidence of one of the most sobering facts about American power: its very existence.

There were practical reasons why the invitation of President Allende to the Enterprise might have been courteously turned aside. Showing a flag which is unwelcome to any sizable, or energetic, portion of the population visited can cause trouble. Even hefore the kidnappings in Ankara, calls by the Sixth Fleet in Turkish ports entailed rioting, although official relations between Turkey and the United States are excellent, and Turkey is an ally in NATO.

In Chile, the attltnde toward the United Statee is certainly ambivalent, to put it mildly. And if one wanta to go back in history, there was a visit by the USS Baltimore to Valparaiso in 1891 which brought Chile and the United States to the brink of war, when a liberty party from the cruiser was mobbed in the streets.

Bot the abrunt decision in Washington to forbid the Enterprise from stopping at Valparaiso, after Mr. Allende's invitation. and after plana had been made for formal receptions, was merely stupid. Naturally, there is much discussion and many guesses

At a time when the American military as to who advised what, and why, with respect to the nay-saying, and speculation as to how the episode will affect relatione between Washington and Santiago, as well as among the various factions of the Chilean

> But the real lesson of the affair lies in the dilemma it reveals. An American landing in, say, Lebanon, was one aspect of American power. American refusal to intervene in the Nigerian civil war was another: negative. perhaps, but nonetheless a function of power, not of powerlessness. Had the Enterprise visited Valparaiso in the teeth of even covert resistance by the Allende government, it would surely have been called part of a plan of "political and economic aggresslon" against Chile. And those were the very words used by the secretary-general of the Socialist party in Chile when the Enterprise was forbidden to stop in the Chilean

President Nixon has been working toward what is called, in current jargon, a lower American proflie in foreign affairs. And he has had some success in this venture. But certainly until that lowered profile is accepted as normal, mere abstentions can be seen ae dramatic. The fact that this may have been intended in the episode of the Enterprise-unless, indeed, it was largely the result of frictions between the State Department and the Defense Department, as may well be the case-does not alter the fact that the American military potential bulks large in the world today. That has to be considered, in whatever way the potential may be used, abused, or unused.

Security of Israel's Borders

that the future of peace in the Middle East depends heavily on Israel, Israel's faliure so far to commit herself to the withdrawal provisions of the Security Council Resolution of Nov. 22, 1967, has seriously jeopardized negotiations at the United Nationa and embarrassed her friends there.

For more than three years Washington has strongly supported Israel'a demand that the Arabs accept their obligations under the Security Council resolution outlining the principles of a Middle East settlement and that Arab leaders declare their willingness to sign a peace agreement with Israel, In the absence of clear evidence that the Arab states were prepared to move aeriously toward peace, American diplomacy has firmly resisted efforts by the Arabs and the Soviet Union at the United Nations to force Israel to make unilateral concessions.

But now that Egypt has responded positively to UN Ambassador Jarring's recent initiative, signifying readiness to comply with the terms of the Security Council resolution, it is increasingly difficult for the United States to object to international demands that Israel do likewise, especially in respect to withdrawal from most of the conquered territory.

President Nixon made clear in his State of the World message that the United States government continued to support the interpretation of the withdrawai provisions as spelled out by Secretary of State Rogers on Dec. 9. 1969: "We believe that while recogized political boundaries must he established

Secretary-General Thant has made clear and agreed upon by the parties, any changes in the pre-existing lines should not reflect the weight of conquest and should be confined to inaubstantial alterations required for mutual accurity. We do not aupport expansionism. We helieve troops must be withdrawn as the resolution provides."

This does not mean that Americans are insensitive to the deeply felt concern of Israelis for their country's future security. The United States responded with massive new military and economic assistance when the Israelis were threatened last fall by Soviet-Egyptian violations of the cease-fire. President Nixon has repeated his pledge of direct American support for international guarantees of a final peace settlement. As a further warranty of the United States commitment to Israel's survival, the administration might find it timely now to give consideration to Senator Fulbright's proposal of last summer for a supplementary bilateral defense pact with Israel to back up any United Nations guarantee. Under present circumstances thie suggestion seems to us to have more validity than it did six months ago.

Israel's basic demand for secure bordere strikes a responsive chord in this country. But the Israelis must be persuaded that borders acknowledged by their neighbors and guaranteed by the international community will prove in the loog run to be more secure than borders seized by force and held in defiance of world opinion and of persisting hostility from the former occupants.

International Opinion

Nixon's Strategy?

It is now clear that the threat of an invasion of North Vletnam, which President Thieu makes more and more often in public, far from irritating Mr. Nixon, auita a deliberate tactic on his part. The question is not to alarm American public opinion overly while shedding enough doubt to make the leaders in Hanol hesitate to eend to the Laotian front a certain number of units normally assigned to the defense of North Vietnamese territory. The ambiguity can be even more easily fostered—Mr. Nixon probably will not fail to do so-since it is already known that USAF activity on North Vletnamese territory is to take even greater proportions in the coming days. -From Le Figaro (Paris).

Nasser and Sadat

When President Nasser died last September the Western world, as well as the Arab world, was juil of lamentations that Egypt had lost the only leader whose prestige was great enough for her to launch serious peace initiatives with Iarael or even talk of recognizing that country's soverelguty. Yet after six months his successor, the quiet and undramatic President Sadat, has done just that, thereby seizing the initiative from the Israelis on the battleground of diplomacy. It is an object lesson that no man, however great, is indispensable. In Cairo, as in Paris. an idealist has been succeeded as head of state by a pragmatist, and the mixture is proving a beneficial one.

-From the Sunday Telegraph (London).

Problems in Turkey

Undoubtedly, the ascertainment of the real quality of the organizers of the current unrest in Turkey makes even heavier the responsibilities of the Turkish government, which in the name of "democracy" persistently refused to take the required draconian steps against these gangsters, before they could kidnap the soidlers of an allied country and threaten them with Turkey can only be saved from chaos by a decisive intervention of her armed forces. And fortunately for the neighboring country, it seems that this moment is not far off.

WASHINGTON .- So "the boys," as we call them, are coming back from the war, but-what are they coming back to? And what are they bringing back with them -what thoughts, what dreams, what habits?

It is easier to answer the first question than the second. They are coming back to a divided country, which bas five million unemployed and a dwindling market for unskilled labor; a fabulously rich country with a sbortage of bouses as well as jobs, and a surplus of inflatioo and social tension—scarcely "a iand fit for herores."

We do not know what they are bringing back with them, but we know they are no longer 'boys.' They are men trained in violence and guerrilla warfare, many of them no doubt resentful of their contemporaries who stayed at home, many more hautalized by battle or corrupted by cheap strong dope, all of them expecting, and rightfully too, work and a decent life.

No doubt a majority of them, as in past wars, will slip back under the orderly and civilizing routine of work and family. General Westmoreland, for example, is persuaded that the discipline of Army life will prove to be a stronger and more lasting force than the brutality or the cor-

A Deb1

Still, even if he is right, even if they are not a problem or a danger, they are surely a debt. At least on this we should be able to agree, regardless of our views on the war. It is not a debt that can await the slow return of "full employment" or "stable prices," both of which may be far down the road. Many of them are going to be mental casualties or even prisoners of war at home -restless, frustrated, and out of

The government, of course, is conscious of all this. There is a demobilization program designed to easa the transition back to civilian life, hospital care for the wounded, educational assistance for the yearners, medical and psychiatric help for the dope ad-dicts—even a careful security watch just in case-but the sum of all this is pitifully small compared to the magnitude of the

The returning veterans, however, are a special question, a first priority, an obvious test for revenue sharing and local responsibility, and they need federal money and special local help much faster than they are getting it now.

What is happening in most cases, despite the belp of veterans' organizations and federal assistance, is that most of them are thrown in with the rest of the unemployed to seek jobs or welfare as best they can. During the autumn months of 1970, according to the latest figures, public welfare increased faster than ever before, partly as a result of returning veterans, and the increase already threatens to drive welfare costs up at least $1.5 bil-

U.S. Economic Signposts Dispute Forecasts Of Brisk Recovery, But Stocks Move Up

By Thomas E. Mullaney NEW YORK, March 7 (NYT) .-

Recent economic signposts are offering little encouragement to the optimists in Washington and Well Street. Most of the current data suggest that the robust runup in business activity projected the Nixon administration for 1071 is still some distance sway.

While government officials continue to clarion highly confident forecasts on this year's economy, the private business sector persists in its skepticism and the financial markets are still asserting some large-scale doubts as

Without question, the mild re-cession that started in the fall of 1969 is now ao event of the past, but the recovery so far has not generated any great force, indicating some rather grim prospects for significantly reducing unemployment over the next several months.

There was little reason for jubilation in the two latest barome-ters of the economic situation disclosed on Friday. True, the unemployment rate for February designed to 5.8 percent from January's 6 percent rate, but most of the decline represented the fewer number of persons seeking parttime jobs and there was a drop of about 300,000 in the number of persons holding jobs. At the same time, the increase in the wholesale price Index for February was adjusted upward by 1 10 to 7,'10 of 1 percent.

The strong economic gains in December following the end of the General Motors strike were not matched in January and probably were not achieved in February either.

Most disheartening to those who had counted on a gain of perhaps $30 billion in the gross national product during the first quarter of 1971 were the moderate nature of the industrial production upturn during the first two months of the new year and the lack of any real thrust in retail sales so far.

A week ago, business circles were startled when a survey by Rinfret-Boston Associates forecast a surprisingly strong gain of 11 percent in capital outlays for new plant and equipment this year. Among the week's data that provided no inspiration for the market were the reports that auto sales rose only 6.9 percent in the final 10 days of February; the 9 percent drop in construc-tion contracts during January; the continuance of strong price increases on products such as paper bags, cans and various of a high (5.6 percent) rate of unemployment during February.

Dow Surges

The stock market closed the week generally higher, with the leading stock averages showing fairly strong gains. The week's 19-point advance pushed the Dow Jones industrial stock index to its highest point in 20 months at 898.00.

Meanwhile, a oervous mood and erratic price movements prevailed in the bond market. but the corporate sector successfully handled more than $1 billion of new issues last week as it headed into what promised to be the second most active financing month on record.

Most of the bonds were readily purchased by investors such as state pension funds that seem to be flush with cash to be put to work, However, yields, which had climbed sharply during the latter part of February, had to be raised somewhat further early last week to move the new issues. ## Virtual Rejection on Rolls Jet

Lockheed Cool to British Proposal

Daniel J. Haughton, Lockheed chairman.

By Philip Greer NEW YORK, March 7 (WP) .-Daniel J. Haughton, chairman of Lockheed Aircraft Corp., virtuaily rejected Friday the latest British government proposals for continuing development of the Rolls-Royce RB-211 jet engine. The RB-211 is intended to power Lockheed's L-1011 TriStar airbus. Excess costs in dereioping the engine have been blamed for putting Rolls-Royce into recelvership.

While he did not specifically discard the offers made in London conferences last week, Mr. Haughton said that his company would not be willing to take on any "open ended" commitments. The British government has offered to put $144 million into Rolls to cover additional costs any charges above that figure. "I don't think I'm going to accept that one," Air. Haughton said at a news conference bere after a daylong conference with representatives of airlines which inve ordered a total of 178 of the three-engine jets.

Mr. Haughton said that he was not closing the door on further ocgotiations with the British, although he has no definite plans for a return to London.

Mr Haughton noted that the British government has offered to guarantee Rolls lovce's completion of its contract with Loc:heed if Lockheed could give assurances of its own performance. "I'm dedicated to keeping my commitment, but I can't ask anybody to guarantee it," Mr.

If Lockheed will agree to absorb Haughton told the reporters

He said that his company is actively exploring the possibility of using other engines for the jetliner. Ha mentioned General Electric's CF-6, which powers the DC-10 airliner made by McDcnnell-Douglas Corp., and the JT9 DWN made by the Pratt & Whitney Division . United Aircraft, which is used on the Boeing-747. Either engine could he ready about the same time as the Rolls-Royce engine, he said, adding, "If I met all the demands of the Rolls proposition it might cost more than Amertean-made engines." He acknowledged, though, that a change in engines would require alterations the design of the airplane which might add more than $50 million to its development cost.

Major European and American financial institutions were reported today to be preparing to lend Investors Overseas Services. the giant mutual fund group, between $5 million and $10 million in new working capital. At the same time, though. bonds carrying lower yields continued to drop sharply in price. The husiness world remains quite d: ':lous about the administration's projections for the economy this year, its basic economic strategy for taming inflation and its handling of labor problems, particularly the recent negotiations with construction labor and management.

A large number of business men and private economists feel that the administration's economic hierarchy was overly ambitious in charting a 9 percent growth in the gross national product to $1,065 billion for 1971

-a figure that is some $20 hulion above most private fore-casts. Achieving it would require an excessively expansive fiscal and monetary policy that would breed further inflation, it is fearporary freeze on wages and prices in construction that so, many business and economic sources had hoped for, the administration opted for the blandest of remedies-repeal of the Davis-Bacon Act to limit wage rates on federally supported projects and a renewed appeal to labor and management to draft a voluntary program to curb rising costs in their industry. The latter materialized when construction unions and industrial contractors agreed to a nationwide reform of work rules overtime; prohibit feather-bedding, standhy crews and work sicwdowns; allow contractors to hire nonunion labor when union workers are unavailable; permit workers to use all tools of their trade without restriction, and bar illegal strikes, work stoppages or lockouts.

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

A new regime has begun unob-trusively at the American Contract Bridge League, Richard Goldberg has taken over from Earley Blackman as executive secretary of the national orgamisstion.

Goldberg, who is 43 years old, does not have the international reputation of his predecessors Blackwood and Alvin Landy but he has a good record in local tournaments and has won three men's pair titles in five attempts with Robert Wilkins, another league executive. The diagramed deal contributed to one of these victories.

West's hand was not good enough for a normal opening bid, but he was in third seat and the vulnerability was in his favor so he tried one diamond. Wilkins as North overcalled one no-trump, which was more descriptive than a take-out double. East made a weak bid of two spades with a hand on which he could have considered a penalty double.

Goldberg, as South, competed with three hearts, knowing that his partner would recognize this to be competitive rather than encouraging. West raised spades. North took a chance and bid four hearts. He could see some chance that the game would succeed and some that East-West would sacrifice in four spades.

A low spade was played from dummy and East won with the jack. A diamond shift was indicated, but instead East attempted to cash the spade ace. South ruffed, cashed the ace, king of chibs, and drew trumps successfully with dummy's ace, king combina-

five or six books at the time of his bigarre and tragic death in Thailand in 1968. "Contemplation in a World of Action" is a rather specialized one; it is about the problem of resching monasticism, one of the most venerable of Christian institutions, from the assaults of contemporary doubt. Merton spent the last 27 years of his life as a Cistercian-"Trappist" monk. He has journeyed deep into Oriental religion and mysticism and had reached a point at which he saw distinct, universal parallels between some of their concepts and those of orimitive Christianity.

One can react in several dif-ferent ways to such discoveries: There can be rejoicing and wonder that God has led all sorts of men who are separated from each other by time, culture and need, to the same threshold of awareness. Or one can become dreadfully upset that one's institution has failed to gain the insights that others have achiev-

It may appear to be cruel and ungrateful to the beautiful young monk of "The Seven Storey Mountain" to say that Thomas Merton, in "Contemplation in a World of Action," sounds upset and grouchy, but he does. The book is a mixture of his usual profound insights into the basic problem of modern man, himself and God. but its overall effect is that of a disputative memo-randum to an unnamed someone in the hierarchy of the Cistercian

Merton wants monasticism to renew itself, to become more at-tentive to the revealed contemporary problems of alienation, loss of identity and purposeless function and, thus, to the transcendental issue of man's vision of God. He sets out the goal as eloquently as St. Benedict himself could have done: "The specific value that draws a Christian into the 'desert' and 'solitude' (whether or not he remains physically 'in the world') is a deep sense that God alone suffices. The need to win the approval of society, to find a recognized place in the world, to achieve a 'temporal' ambition, to be somebody even in the church, seems to them ir-relevant." Simple, compassionate and valid, a summary that will be recognized by anyone who has been forced by logic to the painful realization that God does. after all. live despite the fallibility of the institutions that claim to portray him, and the frequent banality, hypocrisy and stupidity of some of the men who run the institutions. Obviously Father Merton was at the far end of a long period when he wrote these notes on monastic renewal. He objects to the narrowness and lack of erudition on the part of those responsible for monastic life today; he wants the community of religious to rethink the meaning of discipline and contemplation—not to abolish the harmonious balance between reflection, prayer and hard,

Ali, because of his bombast and his appealed draft-refusal conviction that is awaiting a decision by the Supreme Court, is a hero to many, a villain to others. Frazier, quietly aggressive, has created his own cuit of traditionalists.

As a result, the betting odds might not be an accurate reflection of each gladiator's opportunity for victory.

Prazier is a 7-to-5 favorite in the Las Vegas betting parlors. But many Americans willing to wager appear to have been influenced by the rare opportunity of being able to bet confidently against the 29-year-old Ali, perhaps tarnished after his 3 1/2-year exile, than on the 27-year-old recognized

The crux of this match between unbeaten knockout punchers inyolves two punches-Ali's left jah and Frazier's left hook. Ali, with a 6 1/2-inch advantage in reach, must jab consistently and effectively in order to thwart Frazier's relentless assault. Frazier must connect with his left hook in order to weaken All's dancing legs.

Prazier has never been cut. but All's stilleto-like jab opened a severe gash over Jerry Quarry's right eye in his comeback victory in three rounds last Oct. 26 following his exile.

Although the power of Ali's punch often is minimized, his knockout average is impressive. # Sites in Doubt To Hear Fight

Indochina Included, Others to Be Added

NEW YORK, March 7.-Amerlcan servicemen, including those in Vietnam, will be able to hear a blow-by-blow account of the world's heavyweight championship boxing match tomorrow night between Joe Frazier and Muhammad Ali, but the list of places where the broadcast will be beamed may not be ready until almost ring time.

Under agreement between the Armed Forces Radio and Television Service and Jack Kent Cooke, the chief financial backer of the fight, an examination is under way of the 40-odd countries to which the fight will be transmitted to see how many GIs could be served without encroaching on Mr. Cooke's business commit-

Mr. Cooke said he was "directing" his partner, Jerry Perenchio to permit armed-forces stations throughout the world to broadcast the fight "so long as they are not in conflict with existing exclusive contracts (with stations or closed circult systems) . . . there was never any question of not permitting the broadcast to Vietnam."

But the decision to relay the fight by underground and underwater cable or super-high-frequency relay facilities means that hundreds of thousands of servicemen, apart from those in Indochina and Guam, will not, as they normally can, be able to hear reports of the fight over portable and inexpensive radios.

In addition to the more publicized satellite relay facilties, the Pentagon maintains extensive cable facilities spanning the Pacific from Tokyo to Saigon, crossing the Arctic area and down through Europe to the Mediter-Add Romania

Romania signed up to hear and see the fight over television. Every dimension of this event has a large scale and none is larger than the communications system that will take the fight pictures round the world. The system is expensive and it is the means by which Jerry Perenchio and Cooke, the high rollers, are gambling $2 million.

"I'm talking to Russia," said Dick Rubin, who works for Perenchio, who operates Chartwell Artists, Ltd., which guaranteed Frazier and Ali $2.5 million each. Cooke the sports entrepreneur from Los Angeles, put np most of the money. Everybody in the signed-up countries, save Englishmen. Canadians and Americans, will see the fight free on home television. The exceptions will pay by buying tickets in theaters and arenas, and that is how Perenchio and Cooks hope to recoup. These nations will see the (UPI).—Mario Andretti, driving a Ferrari, yesterday scored a rare American Formula One victory when he triumphed in the South African Grand Prix, first of the 1971 world championship series.

Andretti, hailed as the "wonder boy" of auto racing after his sucses on the American circuit a few years ago, triumphed after a broken rear suspension slowed down New Zealander Denny Hulme, who led from the 17th to the 75th of the 79-lap event. Second behind the Nazareth, Pa., racer was 1969 world cham-

Helping Humans Through Zoo Animals

By Lawrence K. Altman

NEW YORK, March 7 (NYT).

New York Medical College is expanding a program to encourage some students and doctors to leave its hospital and to study in the city's zoos.

The zoos and the medical school are cooperating not only to provide better care for the enimals here and elsewhere but also to try to learn more about human diseases from ailments that naturally-not experimentally- afflict animals.

Experience that future physicians gain in learning how to treat animals, doctors at the college said, might help them take better care of humans, particularly in the field of pediatrics.

Though other medical schools like Johns Hopkins in Baltimore, have cooperative programs with zoos in their localities, doctors at the New York Medical College said that they believe their program is the most comprehensive in the

Handbook Planned

Results of the program, which will cost $150,000, financed in part hy the New York and Staten Island Zoological Societies are expected to be published in a handbook so that veteringrians can take better care of pets and animals in zoos.

"We're trying to interpret animal diseases in context of human diseases." Dr. David Spiro. the medical college's chief pathologist, said.

"There's a vast, unexplored reservoir of valuable disease models," Dr. Spiro said, from information to be collected on the 1,000 animals that die each year in the Bronx, Staten Island, Prospect Park, Flushing and Central Park Zoos.

By studying nature's own exneriments on animals and by trying to detect what, if any, veterinary problems result from the diets fed to animals in roos. the doctors hope to gain in-sights into similar nutritional problems that affect man.

Already, the doctors have raised questions relating to human health from the autopsies that veterinarians like Dr. Emil Dolensek have done at the Bronx Zoo. Or. Dolensek, Dr. Ralph F.

Strebel, a pathologist, and Dr. Edward Garner, a veterinarian at the college, have found that the recent death of an anteater in a New York zoo result-. but some physicians suspect that ed from the effects of arteriosclerosis. To varying extents, this disease ravages the blood vessels and hearts of millions of Americans.

Because a zoo in New York cannot provide an antester with the thousands of ants that the animal normally eats every day in his native habitat, zookeepers feed these animals fruit mashed with milk and eggs. Some doctors believe that diets high in cholesterol, such as from eggs, play a critical role in causing arteriosclerosis.

Question of Diet

The finding raises the question of whether arteriosclerosis occurs naturally among anteaters or whether it is induced by the 200 diet. In either case, the doctors said they may have a better animal model to study the human

The doctors also found that a lemur, which set a record by living 31 years in captivity at the Staten Island Zoo, died from emphysems. This disease causes hundreds of thousands of Americans to become short of breath and die from heart failure resulting from damage to their lungs. Doctors do not know what causes emphysema, air pollution may play an important role.

Perhaps a clue to a better treatment or prevention of a type of joint disease called osteoarthritis might come from the cassowary, a non-flying bird which is native to New Guinea. The 150-pound cassowary, which stands as tall as a human and is the most ferocious flightless bird known, Dr. Strehel said, develops osteo-

Smakes Afflicted

Veterinarians at some zoos note that a mysterious ailment is causing some snakes to lose their normal ability to turn over and slither. Because the snakes stop eating, they die slowly from starvation. While zookeepers are force-feeding snakes such as pythons with mice, doctors specializing in the nervous system are trying to discover what ails the reptiles,

Zookeepers had rushed the dying leopard in a Volkswagen bus to the medical school. There, with medical students watching attentively over their shoulders, the doctors used the same principles to treat the leopard as they would use to

The problem resembled that faced by pediatricians whose young patients are unable to communicate. Just as mothers can relate observations on their children to pediatricians, zoo-keepers can do the same with animals, such as the leopard.

Still the doctors had to use their educated eyes to look for clues such as the tone of the muscles to rule out various causes of the leopard's paralysis.

They X-rayed the leopard, and requested consultations from various specialists such as those who treat infectious diseases. None could detect the cause for the leopard's anathy. The doctors sent samples to the laboratory to determine the level of potassium in the leopard's blood. The report came back labeled for a patient named Mr. Leo Pard.

"How do you know what a normal potassium [level] is for a leopard?" Dr. Strebel asked. That is why the doctors want to accumulate such information on the zoo population. After feeding the leopard with copious amounts of water by vein each day for six weeks, the leopard regained his strength and now walks around the cage. Before the program began. the doctors said, the zookeepers and "one of the handsomest men year-old Margaret Sinchir, m England." S.J. Perelman, the American humorist who set out Friday night to retrace the patch of Fogg in Verne's "Around the World in 80 Days," is 67, loquacious, and though he feels rather strongly that he qualifies on the score of comeliness, he confesses, says The Sunday Times, that even in huilt-up shoes he is "almost a dwarf." In any case, Perelman-accompanied not by a manservant who left the gas on but hy an American secretary in a red trouser autt-has set out to prove that it can still take 80 days to circumnavigate the globe by following Fogg's intinerary as closely as possible, leaving on the night train from London for points east, east and east until arriving back in London 80 days hence. In the century since Fogg's imaginary voyage, however, war has managed to close the Suez Canal, necessitating a detour to the north-by ship from Naples to Istanbul and by rail and car to the Persian Gulf. where he will catch a vessel for Bombay. From there, it's elephant-back, rail and ship ail the way home to London. Another departure from the original: whereas Fogg left his home in Savile Row carrying one bag containing the barest essentials, Perelman set out from the Reform Club with a porter lugging three valises, and the secretary, Mrs. Dianne Baker of Texas, toting the protagonist's typewriter. 'I have taken this modest liberty," said Perelman, "because, as far as I can ascertain, nobody actually checked out how Fogg smelt on his return." As ha started out on the journey which will provide material for a new book, Perelman disclosed that "This whole thing occurred to me
